A Good Example.
Clean streets, buildings in good repair and well painted is evidence of thrift and propriety. It is respectfully suggested that a good example would be set by having the front of the old fire hall on State street painted. The lease of the building has improved the front and built a new walk.

JOURNAL X RAYS.

Married men are more unselfish than single men; they have to be.—Life.

The Astoria Herald says there are only two seasons in Astoria—winter and August.

First Dear Girl: I have no friends to speak of.

Second Dear Girl: Lucky friends.

Have you noticed the enlarged Journal? We've been too busy to mention it, but our readers generally see and think for themselves.

Judge: Why did you steal this gentleman's ring?

Prisoner: I thought the change might do me good.—Exchange.

Some people think that Gov. Geer doesn't keep faith with his friends. Possibly they labor under a misapprehension as to who his friends are.

Carrows: I see Aguinado has again been driven back.

Sutherland: Is that an official dispatch or the truth?—Life.

At a ball, listening: Is that champagne corks popping in the dining room?

"No, it is the young people in the conservatory."—Exchange.

Friend Hofer of the Journal has been taking in some of the British Dominion in his recent outing, the account of which reads like the tale of a Fairy in his paper.—Engle's Broadaxe.

Gen. Bates made a friend of the mother of the Sultan and evidently left a good impression with the hundred mothers-in-law by exhibiting a machine that could talk them all down.—Globe Dem.

As ex-Congressman Ellis has no further hopes of a seat in the national legislature he is anxious to get as near to it as possible. He seeks to become the sergeant at arms of the house. Oh, the fall thereof, my countrymen!—East Oregonian.

Mrs. Isaac: Wasn't that sad about Mrs. Richman.

Mrs. Cohen: What?

"Her husband was drowned with his six-carat diamond stud on and his body cannot be found."—Exchange.

"The first thing we know," said the anti-expansionist, "we shall have a race problem in the Philippines."

"Oh," replied the other man, "we have a race problem there now. If our fellows could reach Aguinado the trouble would be settled in short order."—Chicago Times-Herald.

An exchange pictures a small boy with a hoe in his hand saying indignantly to his father:

"Say the fish are biting like everything down to the creek."

"Well, sonny," says the father, rearing, "you just keep on hoeing the potatoes and I guess they won't bite you."—Youth's Companion.

Caller: I sent you a poem about three weeks ago. What have you done with it?

Editor: I'm holding it. Every little while lately I get to thinking we are not getting out as good a paper as we ought to, and then I take that poem and see how much worse the sheet might be, and that makes me cheerful again. Say, how much'll you take for it?—Chicago News.

Thrifty Buyers

For the last month we've been opening up various lines of fall goods, and getting our store in shape for the heavy trade of the year. The rush on all lines of hop supplies has kept us bustling, but we do not want to stop long enough to say that in winter underwear, hosiery, neckties, shoes, notions, cotton blankets etc., we have the strongest line we have yet shown. Its business to improve every year, and we study to do this. How well we'll ask you to come and see. Our shoe line is a pride to us for we have a host of satisfied customers. We make friends every time we sell a shoe. In the heavy work shoes for men, or substantial shoes for women or children school shoes, we take special pride, and in finer lines they can't surpass our $1.50, $2.00, $2.50 and $3.00 lines. Hamilton Brown, and Rice and Hutchins shoes. In Mackintoshes we have some of the biggest values yet. For school use, for men or women's wear it's all the same we're right at home, and then our underwear, we think we're better than ever. Remember all of our goods are STANDARD QUALITIES of high grade make, bought in large quantities that gets the price and then with our close margin of profit we certainly give values that count. You're invited to call. We appreciate it when folks come in to look around.

CO-OPERATIVE BROTHERHOOD.

Rev. W. E. Copeland Tell of the Colony at Burley, Wash.

Rev. W. E. Copeland, of the Unitarian church, has just returned from a trip to Puget Sound, where he visited the co-operative colony, of which he is one of the organizers, located at Burley, near Tacoma.

He gives the following outline of the work and objects of the colony:

In the Co-operative Brotherhood now begun at Burley, Wash., some 12 miles northwest of Tacoma, we have the beginning of the new civilization. Here we have the machine, the laborer and the land united, and the products of the union belong to the settlement, to all the members of the Brotherhood Industrial Co-operation, rapidly producing wealth to be used for the benefit of all the co-operators. The brotherhood has control of some thousand acres, well watered, fertile and heavily timbered. A sawmill and shingle mill are converting the trees into lumber and shingles. Houses and factories are being rapidly erected, and by the time that winter sets in quite a village will have been built where a year ago was the wilderness. The land and property is held by a board of 12 trustees, three of whom are elected annually for the benefit of the brotherhood. Members pay $1 a month and, after paying $12, in case of accident preventing the member from pursuing his usual avocation, they are entitled to a home and support for themselves and their dependents; in case of death, their families are insured a house and support. By a small monthly payment, members of the Co-operative Brotherhood can provide a home and support for themselves and their dear ones.

Resident members are expected to work nine hours a day, after a time, a shorter number of hours, for which labor they receive their share of the wealth of the colony, which will be larger as the colony increases in number and productivity.

Every movement begins from small things, and a new civilization may come from the small seed of the Co-operative Brotherhood, whose first colony is at Burley, but which expects to expand until the Pacific coast has fully entered on industrial co-operation' which is the natural and logical successor of plutocratic co-operation.

In this colony the children will receive as good an education as the country provides, will work a small portion of the working day, will be instructed in some trade; everything will be done that is possible by co-operation. Abundant opportunity will be given for intellectual improvement. An atmosphere of love and mutual helpfulness will replace the old miasma of competition and hate, resulting in a higher race.

The Co-operative Brotherhood is not to be confused with the Brotherhood of the Co-operative Commonwealth, which was started by Eugene Debs, and which has a colony at Equality, Wash. The Co-operative Brotherhood was organized on September 1, 1898, the leader of the movement being Silas F. Willard, who was associated with Edward Bellamy in the publication of the New Nation, and the intention is to conform as nearly as practicable to the ideas enunciated in "Looking Backward."

It is non-sectarian and non-political. It is incorporated under the laws of Washington, but there is no individual stock, all stock being held in common.

for the members by the board of trustees.

The membership fee is $120, paid either all at once or in monthly installments of $1.

Applicants are subjected to an examination, as it is practically an insurance, 13 monthly payments entitling a member to be taken care of by the brotherhood in case of sickness or disability.

The immediate affairs of the colony are managed by 12 directors who are elected annually by residents of the colony.

Admission to the colony itself is controlled by resident members thereof, except in the case of sick or disabled members of the brotherhood, as above noted.

There are now 600 members of the brotherhood, and about 125 residents of the colony.

The latter is not yet self-sustaining and the payments of the non-resident members are applied to its aid. Of the land owned, 400 acres is creek bottom, covered with alder, vine, maple etc., about 40 acres being cleared, while the balance, hill land, has a growth of fir and cedar timber suitable for building lumber, shingles etc.

The sawmill and shingle mill in operation are paid for and are used in getting out material for the cottages and other buildings in course of erection.

The residents are now living in log houses and tents or camping out, but as soon as possible cottages will be constructed and each family will have its own residence and piece of land. A large hotel is also being built and there will be community dining room for those who prefer.

Each colonist is supposed to work 9 hours per day, and receives his wages in certificates redeemable at the colony store.

A paper called "The Co-operator" is published at Burley, by the colonist.

There is a good wagon road from Burley to deep water navigation, two miles away, but at high tide boats and rafts can be brought to the town itself, which is on the shores of an arm of the sound.

The colonists are satisfied with the experiment, so far, and enthusiastic for the future.

As soon as the colony becomes self-supporting the intention is to start another.

The brotherhood has an offer of land in the Santa Clara valley, California, to which they will probably next turn their attention. Eastern Washington will also be colonized, on some of the land which the state offers free to any only who will perform certain irrigation work.

Dr. Copeland is organizer of the brotherhood for the state of Oregon, and will devote as much of his time as possible to the work. It is not probable that any colony will be started in this state at present, but the ground will be looked over, and a proposition which came from the vicinity of Lafayette will be investigated at once.

The co-operators do not claim to have the only scheme for improving present conditions, but do think they have one good solution, and they are fully in earnest in their effort to carry it out.

Ample Room for Business.

L. M. Kirk, a business man who has been a resident of Salem for several years and who for five years, was proprietor of the Capital City nursery, has been watching the trend of business in Salem and other nearby towns and cities since he sold out his nursery business, and has come to the conclusion that the outlook for our city is good, and offers increasing inducements to invest capital; that as the rich fruit and agricultural lands adjoining the city are further cultivated and more homes erected the volume of business will increase.

Mr. Kirk gives evidence of his faith in the future of Salem by investing in a business, he having purchased from J. F. Gilmore the grain and feed business lately conducted on State street. This business was at one time carried on by Ashley White, who is now assisting Mr. Kirk.

Mr. Kirk continues to occupy the store used by Gilmore and others, and has rented the adjoining building, known as the old city fire hall, the one being used for hay and building material, and the other for storing grain, feed and flour.

These two buildings covering from 54 to 58 State street have been repaired, the walk in front made new, affording an easy and safe entrance to storage and sales rooms, where the proprietor keeps a large stock of the best brand of flour, hay, grain, feed and building material.

A look through these premises will convince a patron that there is no danger of mice destroying the flour sacks, and goods purchased will be delivered clean and fresh with such ample facilities, and being able to buy at the proper time for cash, and having his own delivery teams ready in harness in nearby stables, Mr. Kirk has no hesitation in assuring his patrons that he can furnish all goods in his line at the lowest possible price, making prompt delivery and giving full satisfaction. He has storage room and one of the best scales for use by the public.
